

Human Rights Statement of Oerlikon Textile

1. What we stand for Oerlikon Textile GmbH & Co. KG and its controlled subsidiaries (“Oerlikon Textile”) believe that all human beings should be treated with dignity, fairness and respect.

We are aware that our operations and supply chains may have a potential detrimental effect on the human and environmental rights stipulated in the German Supply Chain Act (“GSCA”) and set out in Annex 1 (“GSCA Rights”). Oerlikon Textile is committed to prevent, end or minimize the extent of violations of GSCA Rights in our own operations and supply chains, and take appropriate remedial actions where violations have occurred. We want to ensure that we are not involved in or benefit from GSCA Rights abuses and aim to strengthen respect for GSCA Rights in our operations and supply chains.

Oerlikon Group¹ has rules of conduct to uphold its standards worldwide and define the ethical and legal framework of all its business activities. As part of Oerlikon Group, Oerlikon Textile is embedded in and committed to this framework. Our rules of conduct, as well as our compliance and risk management, which is described further in the course of this statement, are parts of our management system. This management system with its described parts and processes forms the basis of our continuous risk management with regard to our human rights and environmental due diligence.

The said rules of conduct include the Oerlikon Group Code of Conduct, Oerlikon Group Non-Discrimination and Anti-Harassment Policy, Oerlikon Group Policy on Sustainability, Health, Safety & Environment, Oerlikon Group Policy Against the Use of Child Labor, as well as our Oerlikon Group Supplier Code of Conduct. The Oerlikon Group Code of Conduct and named three policies address our commitment to GSCA Rights and clearly express our human rights-related expectations towards our employees², members of the management bodies and suppliers. When local laws allow behavior that is not permitted by our Oerlikon Group Code of Conduct, our code prevails. If international standards on human and environmental rights extend beyond or conflict with local laws, we adhere to the local laws while trying - as far as possible - to uphold those international standards. Our human and environmental rights-related expectations, including those regarding GSCA Rights, towards our direct suppliers are furthermore set out in our Oerlikon Group Supplier Code of Conduct. Our direct suppliers are expected to have an appropriate human rights risk management system and to adequately address these human and environmental rights expectations along their supply chain. To the extent possible, we expect them to support our GSCA activities. With respect to our joint ventures, Oerlikon Textile makes efforts - to the extent possible - to also implement our standards, and ethical and legal framework as well as other parts our risk management systems at the business operations and suppliers of these companies.

We are aware that specific GSCA Rights could more likely be affected by our and our suppliers’ business operations. Oerlikon Textile currently considers the following risks regarding GSCA Rights to be the most likely ones to occur in our own operations and along our supply chains:

Labor management relations, freedom of association and collective bargaining

Oerlikon Textile operates globally and faces risks related to the assurance of international labor and social standards for its own and suppliers’ employees. Oerlikon Group as a whole is committed to treat all employees fairly and with respect and to fully respect applicable employment and labor laws wherever it operates. Integrity and team spirit are two of Oerlikon Group’s core values and aim at a respectful working environment honoring employees' rights. Oerlikon Group's long-standing belief is that the interests of the Group and its employees are best served through a favorable, collaborative work environment with direct communication between employees and management. Oerlikon Group endeavors to establish these favorable employment conditions, to promote positive relationships between employees and managers, to facilitate employee communications, and to support employee development. Oerlikon Textile is fully committed to these expectations and principles. Oerlikon Textile constantly strives to increase employment opportunities and standards for our employees and - where possible - our suppliers' employees. Throughout our operations, we honor equal employment opportunities. Qualifications, skill and experience are the basis for choosing and promoting our co-workers. We prohibit and do not tolerate discrimination and harassment. No one shall be discriminated against on grounds set out in item 7 of the GSCA Rights listed in Annex 1. Oerlikon Textile respects the legal rights of its employees to form, join or to refrain from joining worker organizations, including labor organizations or trade unions, and the right to collective bargaining. Oerlikon Textile complies with the applicable local laws regarding employee and third-party involvement and will not discriminate based on an employee's decision to join or not join a labor organization. Oerlikon Textile respects the rights of employees to organize themselves and makes managers aware of those rights. Oerlikon Textile also respects its employees' rights to take part in collective bargaining. We abide by legally binding collective agreements and work effectively and constructively with the employee representatives. We take care that employee representatives do not suffer discrimination and that they have open access to members in the workplace.

¹ Oerlikon Group means OC Oerlikon Corporation AG, Pfäffikon (Switzerland) with its direct and indirect subsidiaries, including Oerlikon Textile.

² The term “employee” in this statement refers to employees, executive staff, temporary employees, working students, graduates, apprentice and trainees of Oerlikon Textile GmbH & Co. KG and its controlled subsidiaries.

Furthermore, at Oerlikon Group, a safe work environment that is free from and provides for protection against human trafficking and slavery as well as unlawful child labor is core for us. It is a group-wide principle that we expect our suppliers and any other third party to respect these human rights, regardless of local legislation and customs. The textile and garment industry is associated with child labor and trafficking in its supply chains, e.g., children working in spinning mills or in garment factories. Countries that are known for child labor and trafficking in the textile and garment industry are e.g., India, China, Bangladesh, or Egypt. Oerlikon Textile produces and supplies machines and equipment that are used for the production of filaments and yarns. Those filaments and yarns are used for the production of textiles in downstream supply chains. Oerlikon Textile itself is however at no stage involved in the production of textiles and garments and the respective supply chains. We are not aware that GSCA Rights risks and potential violations of GSCA Rights along the supply chains of the textile and apparel industry also exist with respect to our own operations and our supply chains, they are also beyond our control and influence. In addition, our direct customers' operations are at the beginning of the textile production process whereas - according to our understanding - the stages of the textile production processes that are associated with child labor and trafficking occur at later stages along the downstream supply chain and may also be beyond our customers' influence.

Principle of "Zero harm to people"

As a manufacturing company, erecting and putting its machines and equipment into operation and/or supervising those activities everywhere in the world, accidents are a GSCA Rights risk that we cannot entirely avoid. Oerlikon Textile's ambition with respect to health and safety is "zero harm to people". I.e., our goal is to ensure that no one comes to harm within Oerlikon Textile's sites or while working for Oerlikon Textile at external locations. We therefore put a strong emphasis on the health and safety of our employees at our German and foreign sites. Oerlikon Group as a whole is committed to this principle and adherence to the relevant standards as well as monitoring of risks, accidents and defined measures is not only done locally, but also on Oerlikon Group level. Our management system aims to ensure that the applicable workplace health, safety and environmental legislation is treated as a minimum standard in all areas where we conduct business. Our health, safety and environment program, which is based on hazard recognition, risk assessment and the elimination of hazards, seeks to establish an incident-free work environment.

Environmental aspects

Oerlikon Textile provides solutions and systems used by our customers for polymer processing. Our operations and manufacturing processes require amongst others the use of resources like land, water and energy and result in emissions. Oerlikon Textile has long recognized the need to reduce this impact of our business on the environment. We therefore constantly strive to reduce the use and consumption of resources along our operations and the generation of waste and to take improvement measures in this respect. For water discharged, we comply with local regulatory requirements and regularly perform compliance checks on effluent discharged when conducting our health, safety and environmental checks. We monitor our energy consumption on a regular basis and also started to improve the quality of our reporting on waste. We further engage in analysis to identify energy consumption, waste disposal practices, and Co2 emissions that we could manage more effectively.

Raw materials in upstream supply chains

Oerlikon Textile's operations are positioned at the end of multi-stage supply chains. Our production processes include the use of raw material, semi-finished and finished products made e.g. of iron, steel and metal. Semi-finished products which account for about three-quarter are the greatest share of our procurement spend. Finished products account for about 20% and raw materials account for less than 5% of our procurement spend. Oerlikon Textile procures more than 50% of the raw materials and semi-finished products and more than 40% of the finished products from German suppliers. We are however aware of the fact that the production of the goods procured by us is dependent from the sourcing and conversion of raw materials and the production of components, semi-finished and finished goods at earlier international stages of our upstream supply chains. The sourcing of raw materials and the production of those goods in foreign countries at earlier stages may result in risks with respect to GSCA Rights. Our machines and equipment include lubricants and the same may apply with respect to the lubricants we use in our production.

2. Our approach to implement the GSCA and corresponding due diligence processes

Oerlikon Textile strives for continuous improvement and further development of the human rights due diligence processes.

Risk analysis

We understand it as part of our GSCA obligations to get an even better understanding and visibility of potential and actual GSCA Rights aspects at our own operations and along our supply chains. Oerlikon Textile will therefore continue its risk analysis with a specific focus on GSCA Rights in accordance with the GSCA at its own operations and regarding its suppliers in the course of 2023. This includes that GSCA Rights risks are being analyzed from the perspective of (potentially) affected persons. For this risk analysis we will continue to use an established analysis solution of an external provider to identify and evaluate GSCA Rights risks potentially or actually resulting from our own operations and our direct suppliers. Our activities will also include an analysis whether there exists competent evidence of GSCA Rights risks along our supply chain and indirect suppliers. We regularly conduct a dialogue with internal stakeholders to gain additional insights on potential GSCA Rights aspects for Oerlikon Textile. These dialogues create awareness for GSCA compliance of our employees. The risk analysis pursuant to the GSCA will be continued on an annual and occasion-related basis in the future, e.g., in case of material changes of our business activities or the launch of new products, or competent evidence of GSCA Rights risk at indirect suppliers.

We are currently in the process of conducting the GSCA risk analysis. Oerlikon Textile (i) operates globally and has multi-national supply chains, (ii) procures raw material, semi-finished and finished products sourced and produced at different stages of upstream supply chains, and (iii) is positioned at the end of multi-stage supply chains. Those facts lead to a certain complexity and diversity, and we consider them a material challenge of our risk analysis. Our above-mentioned rules of conduct address our commitment to and expectation with respect to certain GSCA Rights. So far, adherence to our rules of procedures is to a certain extent monitored at a local level and by suppliers. We strive to continuously replace the monitoring at those levels by a formal system that systematically and in a centralized manner gathers the data which of our operations are considered to have potential risks of GSCA Rights incidents. With respect to our suppliers, we have a supplier due diligence process as described below. We constantly make efforts to extend our supplier due diligence process to address further GSCA Rights aspects and to collect additional information regarding potential GSCA Rights risks. From the risks identified in the course of our risk analysis, we will prioritize those risks that may have the most negative impact for the affected parties or environment. The prioritization will be based on our influence and our contribution to the GSCA Rights issue, the severity of the (potential) negative impact and the probability of the occurrence of the risk.

Complaints procedure

Oerlikon Group believes that an effective risk detection process must include a safe opportunity for whistleblowers to share their knowledge of risks and violations of rights with us. A robust whistleblowing process is therefore part of the compliance processes of Oerlikon Group, in which Oerlikon Textile has participated in the past. In the context of the GSCA, Oerlikon Textile strongly urges the reporting of any GSCA Rights incidents to prevent and early detect as well as effectively mitigate potential adverse effects on GSCA Rights. Employees and representatives are encouraged to report complaints to their immediate supervisor, their department head, any senior manager of their business unit, their local human resources representative, or their local procurement representative. In addition, employees, representatives, suppliers, third parties' employees and persons directly or indirectly concerned are encouraged to report complaints over the Oerlikon compliance communication channels – in particular our 24/7 Reporting Hotline “Speak Up”. Our 24/7 Reporting Hotline “Speak Up” allows the complainant to bring up GSCA related issues on a confidential and anonymous basis. Any reported complaint will be promptly investigated in a transparent and standardized process. If possible, we aim at a cooperation with the complainant and an amicable and mutual development of actions and steps. In our rules of procedure for the complaints procedure we clearly commit ourselves to the protection of the whistleblower. Those rules of procedure and an overview of the responsibility and accessibility of the persons responsible are published on Oerlikon Group's homepage. In case of a justified suspicion or a specific tip on GSCA Rights risks or potential or actual violations of GSCA Rights at our own operations we will carefully assess the situation and matter of facts and define responsible steps to approach the situation.

Measures

Oerlikon Textile has a robust management system to ensure compliance with legal and regulatory statutes as well as internal standards. This management system comprises amongst others an allocation of clear responsibilities for decision-making and running the business and a compliance and risk management system. It also includes training, communication and consulting activities designed to provide the respective individuals with the information and resources necessary to fulfill their responsibilities and understand their roles in ensuring compliance.

In the current initial phase of our risk analysis according to the GSCA, we started with the following two measures:

- (1) Amending systematically our risk management system by including GSCA Rights issues, e.g., we are currently amending our supplier audit checklist by additional GSCA Rights aspects. In addition, we intend to embed further specific GSCA due diligence processes in our management system on a personal, process and documentation level in the future.
- (2) Building and increasing awareness of the GSCA and having an ongoing dialogue to address our GSCA responsibility. We therefore provided trainings and workshops regarding GSCA Rights and our obligations under the GSCA to Procurement, HR, HSE and Quality employees. We also introduced the GSCA to our employees via our internal communication channels, e.g., our company newspaper "Inside". We intend to continue the training and workshops at all levels as well as to give regular updates on our GSCA activities to our own business and our supply chains via our communication channels.

Further prevention and remediation measures will be defined in the course of 2023 based on the results of our risk analysis and the prioritization of potentially identified risks. For the definition of those measures, we will also consider potential information received via our complaint procedure.

Our management system comprises regular reporting of compliance issues to the management of Oerlikon Textile. We also have compliance council meetings to discuss compliance issues and aspects at management board level of Oerlikon Textile on an annual basis. In the future, the reporting and discussions will also include the results of our risk analysis and specific GSCA Rights aspects. We also aim to consider the results of the risk analysis with respect to our business decisions on supplier choice, product development and responsibility and other areas as may be identified by our risk analysis.

Oerlikon Textile has a supplier qualification and onboarding process for new suppliers. This process includes the provision of supplier self-information and supplier audits, including on-site audits, based on defined standards and criteria also including aspects regarding GSCA Rights. Our Oerlikon Group Supplier Code of Conduct is furthermore part of our standard supply agreements and conditions of supply. We consider our processes, supply agreements and conditions of supply an important measure for engaging our suppliers with respect to GSCA Rights. We are aware that their effectiveness may be limited. However, Oerlikon Textile generally aims at developing long-standing supply relationships which will, with regard to GSCA Rights, allow for a more sustainable dialogue and better collaboration with our direct suppliers. We assume that this co-operative approach may further foster effective results in this respect. Besides this, Oerlikon Textile is aware that our procurement strategy and practices may also impact GSCA Rights directly and indirectly. We therefore aim at accompanying our measures towards suppliers by also considering GSCA Rights aspects specifically in our procurement strategies and practices in the future.

Based on the results of our risk analysis and information on GSCA Rights risks received via our complaints procedure, we will complement our existing procedures and measures by those preventive measures covering identified GSCA Rights risks at our operations and along supply chains. If a potential or actual violation of GSCA Rights is found at the business operations of Oerlikon Textile or along its supply chains, we will take appropriate remedial action(s) to avoid, end or minimize the extent of the violation by developing a responsible solution. This also includes – as the case may be – to make reparations to affected persons. In case of potential or actual GSCA Rights issues at direct suppliers, we will carefully review the issue and use best efforts to take up and mitigate the issue in cooperation with the supplier. In case of a severe abuse of GSCA Rights we reserve the right to suspend or – as a last resort - to terminate the supply relationship if remedial actions do not take effect or less severe remedial actions are not available.

Regular assessment

Both the effectiveness of our prevention and remediation measures as well as our complaints procedure will be assessed on an annual and occasion-related basis for avoiding, mitigating, and remedying adverse effects on GSCA Rights. Occasions that would trigger an assessment are e.g., a material change or extension of the GSCA Rights risk exposure at our own operations or at our direct suppliers due to the launch of new products or new projects or material changes of our business activities or fields.

We further intend to monitor on a regular basis if our measures are complied with. With respect to our own operations, we intend to conduct risk-based audits, regular GSCA compliance check surveys of employees and the management with respect to particular issues as well as follow-up tips and complaints on potential GSCA Rights aspects. With respect to our direct suppliers, we will conduct regular risk-based audits of selected suppliers, such as desk reviews, review of documents requested from the supplier as well as on-site audits, including aspects of social audits. It may be that our current or any future risk analysis identifies potential GSCA rights at our own operations or our direct suppliers that are not appropriately addressed by those measures in place or identified to be enacted. In such case, we will aim at the definition of a more appropriate measure to address such potential GSCA Rights at our operations or along our supply chains. In any case – to the extent practical and feasible – the definition of our measures will consider the perspective of affected persons.

This statement is issued prior to the completion of our current risk analysis activities. It will be reviewed on a regular basis and, as the case may be, amended accordingly.

Reporting

In our annual GSCA report, we will report on the fulfillment of our GSCA obligations. Such report will include amongst others information on identified violations of GSCA Rights, risks that have been prioritized due to certain aspects, and corresponding measures taken. It will also provide information on steps taken because of tips or complaints received via our complaints procedure and draw conclusions with respect to future measures and GSCA due diligence processes.
